Mokena Brothers Return From An Interesting Trip

Henry and Christ Hentsch of Mokena and Earnest Beck, a cousin from Blue Island, made a trip north during the period of March 1 to 16 inclusive. Starting from Blue Island on March 1st they journeyed north thru Chicago, Milwaukee, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Stevens Point, Eau Claire to Glenwood City, arriving there in 15 hours. They visited a few days with a cousin, then headed to the northwest thru St. Paul, Little Falls, Detroit Lakes to Lake Park. The main roads were good, but the side roads were not open for auto traffic, so they made the last three miles over sod and plowed ground.

They stayed here two days visiting with relatives.

The second day occurred one of the worst dirt storms of the season according to the weather reports from Fargo. Starting from here they went to Fargo, then north to Badger. At Badger snow was approximately two feet deep in the fields and higher than the fence posts on the road. All the people were using sleighs. Autos stayed in the garages since before Thanksgiving. This is just 16 miles from Canada and the temperature was 30 below zero the morning of the day they arrived there. They stayed a day, then headed south to Lakefield which is in southern Minnesota.

Weather and roads were swell here. The boys had a fine time visiting with relatives and friends here and they remained four days.

They saw many pheasants, also saw a flock of wild ducks which they say must have run into thousands. The hospitality in this part of the country is something to be marveled at. The boys arrived back home on the 16th of the month. The travelers' lost much sleep, but made up for it in enjoyment.

March 30 Dead Line For Filing Bremen Property Complaints

March 30th will be the last day for filing complaint on 1931 real estate values. C. F. Nielsen, Bremen Township assessor states.

The Cook County assessor gave all town assessors authority to submit new land values last year and he selected committees in the various villages to assist on land value in villages. The Bremen Township Farm Bureau recommended 3 men to assist in working out new values on farm land.

The County Assessor would not allow township assessors to work on building value as he stated he would take care of the valuation of the buildings in the entire county.

Local Assessor, C. F. Nielsen his committee submitted the land values to Cook County assessors committee for approval and Mr. Jacobs, the Cook County Assessor met with his committee at a later date for his final approval.

The local assessor's committee had to compromise on some land value and recommended reductions from 25 per cent to 70 per cent, but after Mr. Jacobs approval. Assessor C. F. Nielsen finds Bremen Township got a land cut averaging 43 per cent so he suggests that all property owners in Bremen Township who have an increase in the 1931 valuation to apply to Cook County Assessors office, room 312, County building and ascertain cause for raise in the value and if not satisfactory, to file a complaint with the appeal board in room 337, County building, as the land cut made by the local assessor and his committees should reduce the total valuations.

The only thing would be that the County Assessor raised the building values.

Men of Frankfort M. E. Church Organize Club

On the evening of March 15th, the men of the Frankfort M. E. church organized a club. The Frankfort Endeavor Club was the name chosen. The officers elected are: Wesley R. Hollstein, President; Arthur C. Bauch, vice president; Frank J. Kohlhaugen, treasurer; Reuben C. Schellhase, secretary. A fine group of men were in attendance at the initial meeting of the club, and an inspiring spirit was in evidence throughout the evening. Since this club has been begun in the interest of both church and community, it is hoped that many men will be present to enjoy the festivities of the coming meetings which are to be held on the first Monday of each month. The Social Committee elected, consists of the Rev. C. F. Schellhase, A. C. Bauch, and Mr. L. Woodman. These men have put themselves wholeheartedly to the task before them, so that the seriousness and fun already anticipated will be provided. All men, whether or not members of the club are eligible to become members and to participate in the meetings.

The purpose and aim of the club are high and can be best expressed by quoting the second article of its constitution: viz, "The purpose of this organization shall be to help men discover the mind of Christ, reproduce the character of Jesus, develop a passion and preparation for personal evangelism, apply Christian ideals to human relationships, adopt a Christian program for home life and

Wolf Road Right of Way Matter Goes To State Officials

The Wolf Road right of way matter has been referred to the new members of the Illinois Highway Department for their consideration.

At a meeting of the Will County Board held Monday in Joliet, the petition of C. M. Cleveland offering to donate land for the Wolf road if it be build in a southwesterly direction from the Hickory Creek south of Mokena instead of a straight route thru the Cleveland timberland as originally surveyed. Another petition from the Joliet Real Estate Board was read advocating the south west route on the assumption that it cost less to build the Wolf road connection with the Lincoln highway via this route than the straight way.

Another petition was presented to the county board signed by 95 per cent of the people of Frankfort and Mokena asking the County Board to build the road over the straight road as originally surveyed.

Supervisor Fred Francis of New Lenox, chairman of the bond issue committee made a motion that this matter be referred to the new members of the State Highway Department for their consideration and the board concurred in this.

Four Youths Fined $25 By Mokena Judge

A trial reeking with salaciousness, charges of adultery, martial infidelity, threats to do bodily harm and disorderly conduct, was tried before Police Magistrate John F. Schultz in the village hall in Mokena before a packed house Monday morning.

According to the testimony offered Mrs. Mildred Bixler of Scottsburg, Indiana, following domestic difficulties, came to make her home with her sister, Mrs. Roy Muller residing on a farm near Frankfort. After living with her sister and family for nine weeks, she left after Mr. Muller voiced his objections to her coming at two and three o'clock in the morning several times a week after going out with Walter Knoop of New Lenox township. Mrs. Bixler resented her brother-in-law's attitude and went to the Knoop home.

The next evening she in company with Walter Knoop, Ross Meyer, David Sterns, Merlin Montgomery and her brother Wilbert Warning, drove to the Muller home to get her clothes. While she was in the house an altercation arose between Knoop and Muller. The latter seized a neck yoke when Knoop got out of car and Dean Roberts who was visiting at the Muller home parted the belligerents.

The next day Muller got out a warrant charging disorderly conduct against Walter Knoop, Ross Meyer, David Sterns and Merlin Montgomery.

The case was to have come up for trial in the court of Judge John M. Clark, but a change of venue was taken to the court of Police Magistrate John F. Schultz in Mokena.

After hearing all the testimony and the pleas of attorneys, Magistrate Schultz fined each defendant $25 and costs and then suspended the fine and only collected the costs.

Attorney A. H. Krusemark was the attorney for the plaintiff and James Wyze was consul for the defendants.

Orland PTA Makes Important Suggestion

The Orland Park PTA wishes to make the following announcement, which should be of vital interest to all mothers of children of the ages of 6 months to 6 years: Arrangements have been made for the free administration of diphtheria toxoid to children of the above age group. This will be given at the pre school clinic at Orland Park on April 12th and May 10th. It will only be administered on these dates and as two injections are necessary, mothers are urged to bring their children to the clinic of April 12th.

The administration of toxoid has been demonstrated to be an almost infallible safeguard against diphtheria. At the Illinois Health Convention held at Springfield last December, conclusive evidence was then presented attesting to the efficacy of toxoid administration as a prophylactic. In the city of Chicago where a concerted campaign has been waged for the immunization of children, the death rate from diphtheria has been brought down to the lowest point in its history. Mothers, banish the fear of the dread disease of childhood. Safeguard your little ones against the menace of diphtheria by taking advantage of this offer of free immunization.

All mothers who have children who will start school in September are urged to get in touch with Mrs. Ray Doctor of Orland, Welfare chairman, Mrs. L. M. Arnold, Mrs. Umlar of Palos Park, or Mrs. Wm. Little of Worth who will be glad to outline the aims and purposes of the "Summer Roundup."

Mrs. Edgar Mitchell of Orland Dies

Mrs. Edith C. Mitchell, nee Becker aged 55 years, died at her home in the town of Orland, March 18. Surviving are her husband, Edgar W., one son, Orville; two daughters, (Irene), Mrs. Lincoln Macauley, and Dorothea; her mother, Mrs. Catherine Becker; one brother, George Becker.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. John Mullen and Rev. Paul Sanders, both of Orland officiated. Burial was in Brooks cemetery.

Mrs. Mitchell was born in Kenosha, Wisconsin. She was united in marriage with Edgar W. Mitchell thirty-two years ago.

Car Catches Fire

While Mrs. F. A. Tooley of Mokena was driving her car from Wolf road onto the street in front of the Mall lumber yard in Mokena, about ten o'clock Tuesday morning, the car suddenly burst into flames. The fire siren was sounded and in a few seconds plenty of help arrived. Tom Moore put the fire out. The car was taken to the Cooper & Hoostert garage.

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

Do you believe in shopworn methods of administration? Do you believe what was good for our grandfathers is good for us? There are roads in Frankfort township that haven't seen stone in 25 years and there are people one half mile from hard roads who have to walk to the hard road and leave their cars at the neighbors because they cannot drive up to their homes on the wet black dirt.

These people are supposed to pay taxes for their cars and they could use them 12 months of the year if they had roads to get out of their yards.

Why don't they get stone? Because there aren't enough votes to bother with so they go by unnoticed and the powers that be can't be bothered. We want votes they say, but they forget the fact that these taxpayers are the largest ones in the township and deserve consideration.

History is being made every day by those that sweep away the cob webs of playing politics and go ahead and get things done.

There are many things to be accomplished here in Frankfort township, but the old stand patters and self satisfied politicians say we'll do it tomorrow. Their ideas are worn out. We must be alert and start using new ideas locally. Voters it is your township. Tell them who you want next April 4th for Supervisor. A man who will go ahead and face things as they are or a side stepper who only wakes up at election time. Let's get things DONE.

Reckless Driver Hits Car at Mokena

A reckless smart aleck driver disregarding the lives and property of others, drove his car at high speed down Wolf road while people were coming out of the St. Mary Hall in Mokena Friday night to get into their cars parked on the other side of the pavement. The reckless youth collided with a another car, damaging it and his own car. When he was remonstrated with he said "the dumb farmers" should get out of his way. A fellow like that is a menace to the motoring public and his auto license should be revoked at once.

Orland Candidates Pay For Ballots

The Orland Township Clerk wishes to have it made clear to all the voters of the Township that all the sample ballots marked or otherwise that have been circulated by the various candidates for town offices, have been ordered printed and are being paid for by the candidates themselves, and not by the township.

Flower Show Coming Big Event In Chicago

Spring is here. Or at least, Spring will be here at Navy Pier, Chicago. Spring in all her glory will be found at the Seventh Annual Flower Show sponsored by The Garden Club of Illinois, a federation of 125 garden clubs located in the cities and villages throughout the state. This federation has a membership of approximately 15,000 men, women and children and the object of the Flower Show is to give Chicago and the middle west something beautiful and educational, something which will teach thousands who have never had a garden before, just what they can have from a small garden plot.

The Navy Pier lends itself ideally to the staging of this spectacle. It is accessible from all parts of the city, the surface lines take one direct to the pier. There is also ample free parking space for those who wish to drive their own cars to the show.

The Flower Show will be open to the public on the evening of March 31 from 6 until 10 p. m., and daily thereafter from 10 a. m., to 10 p. m. closing at 10 p. m., on Saturday, April 8.

It is to satisfy the desires of the amateur, to fulfill Spring's promise of better things to come, that the members of the Garden Club of Illinois have been laboring for many months in preparation for this Flower Show. Interest and competition has never been so keen for people harassed in mind, are turning more and more toward working with the soil and the enthusiasm expressed by amateurs and professionals alike, has been very gratifying. Seventy-three garden clubs, the largest number in any show yet held, have entered exhibits and the men in the National Society of Gardeners and The North Shore Horticultural Society are working with their choicest blooms to bring them to perfection for the competition in their classes.

For many years, leaders of the east have entered exhibits in the larger flower shows along the Atlantic Seaboard, but not until this year have many of the large private estates around Chicago shown a willingness to exhibit and co operate in this Chicago Flower Show. It has been a great incentive to the executive committee this year as well as years past, to have the splendid encouragement and co operation of Mrs. J. Ogden Armour will again build a garden of plants grown in her own greenhouses. Her daughter, Mrs. John J. Mitchell, who has inherited a great love of gardening from her mother, is sending to her beautiful estate in Santa Barbara, California for plant material to be used in the exhibits she will make.

Looking For New Revenue

With the return of legalized beer many of the towns in this section who had saloon licenses in effect during the pre prohibition days, are considering this as a means of securing a much needed source of new revenue.

A FAIR OFFER

by BEN FRANKLIN

"Make a full estimate of all you owe, and all that is owing to you. Reduce the same to note. As fast as you collect, pay over to those you owe; if you can't collect renew your notes every year and get the best security you can. Go to business diligently, and be industrious—lose no time; waste no idle moments—be very prudent economical; avoid pride but the pride of acting justly and well—be faithful in your duty to God, by regularly and hearty prayer, morning and night—attend

In Franklin's day there was a depression, this is the way he advised as a means of being comfortable.

In our day of depression if we would follow the old rule no doubt there would be more happiness and the depression would soon be lifted.

FORMER MAYOR OF FRANKFORT IN RACE AGAIN

A red hot village election is in the offing for Frankfort with former Mayor George Letts and the present incumbent George Haass in the race for mayor. The two tickets line up as follows:

First ticket:
For mayor, George F. Haass.
For village trustees: Fred Marti, Charles Harmening and Manson La Hue.

The second ticket lineup is:
For Mayor, George Letts.
For village trustees: Fred Marti, Charles Harmening and Manson La Hue.

The office of police magistrate is going begging, no candidates having filed for this office.

Prof. Thompson To Address P. T. A. At Mokena

The Mokena PTA are planning to have one of the best meetings of the year next Tuesday evening at their regular session when they will have as the speaker, Prof. J. M. Thompson musical director of the Joliet city schools. Prof. Thompson is known nation wide for his wonderful endeavors in the field of music and is a very pleasing and interesting speaker. The Joliet public schools rank high in their musical abilities, to the credit of their director.

The Mokena PTA officers wish to urge all members to be present and at the same time urge all non members to be present also, so all may avail themselves of hearing one whom they will enjoy. The hour is 7:45 p. m., in the auditorium of the Mokena public school. There is every indication that Prof. Thompson will be heard also in music as well as speaking which will be a real treat. Be sure to attend and bring your neighbors and friends too.

Are You A Good Guesser?

Here's a chance to get enough of the finest flour in the world to last your family for months, absolutely free. Simply estimate the weight of the huge flour sack at the Vogt Department Store in Tinley Park.

At the end of the contest, the giant sack will be weighed in public and given to the person who made the best estimate. A 49 lb. sack will also be given to the second best estimator and a 24½ lb. sack to the third best estimator.

You women who have bought flour for years are naturally good judges of the weight of a sack. Take a look at the Jumbo sack and make an estimate of its weight.

Two weeks from now this giant sack will be publicly weighed and the prizes will be awarded.

Mokena Girls Team Wins Tiuley Game

The Mokena Town Girls basketball team journeyed to Tinley Park last Friday evening and played the Tinley Park Girls basketball in the school auditorium. The score was 43 to 24 in favor of Mokena. It was a good game, both teams doing excellent work.

ILLINOIS
STATE NEWS

Without any fuss or feathers, with only a short talk required from the maker of the motion, the Illinois senate completed the passage of the bill to repeal the Small Immunity act. On the motion of Rollo M. Shaw of Lawrenceville, Democratic majority leader, the senate concurred in the action of the house repealing the act which exempted the governor and other constitutional officers from ouster by the short and supposedly brief quo warranto method.

Attorney General Otto Kerner filed a new suit in the Circuit court to force directors of the Mississippi Flood Relief fund to turn over $108,572 which they hold to Cook county relief agencies. Defendants in the suit are Richard W. Wolfe, former commissioner of public works; James W. Breen, former assistant corporation counsel, and former Mayor William Thompson. The bill recites that in the spring of 1927 nearly $1,000,000 was raised by Chicagoans for relief of Mississippi flood sufferers. At that time the flood relief fund was incorporated and collections of $139,772 were made by the corporation. Of this sum, only $31,200 was expended for relief purposes. The bill demands an accounting of the fund and asks that a receiver be appointed to take charge of the money.

Attorney General Otto Kerner ordered brokerage houses to cease issuance of circulars giving misleading quotations on bonds of foreclosed properties. Failure to comply with the order will force him to initiate steps to revoke the licenses of offending brokers, the attorney general warned.

Ernest Palmer, insurance superintendent and temporary director of trade and commerce of Illinois, went to Springfield from Chicago after a conference with insurance company executives to arrange for some action to protect insurance assets during the banking emergency.

The three sitting judges of the Seventeenth judicial district, Edward D. Shurtleff of Marengo, Arthur E. Fisher of Lockport, and Ralph J. Dary of Waukegan, issued a joint statement announcing themselves as candidates for re-election next June 5. All are Republicans. Although no announcement has been made by the Democratic organization of the district, it is expected that opposition candidates will be named shortly. The Seventeenth district includes the counties of Lake, Boone, McHenry and Winnebago. Judge Shurtleff is the senior jurist of the three incumbents. He was elected in 1920 to fill a vacancy. The other two judges also were first elected to fill vacancies, Judge Fisher in 1928 and Judge Dary in 1930.

Judges James H. Wilkerson, John P. Barnes, and Charles E. Woodward of the United States District court in Chicago, appointed District Attorney Dwight H. Green to continue in office until his post is filled by appointment of President Roosevelt. Mr. Green was made district attorney by President Hoover in a recess appointment, but the senate failed to confirm the appointment.

STATE BREVITIES

Fire, suspected by officers to have been of incendiary origin, destroyed the tippie of the Beckmeyer Coal company near Carlyle with loss estimated at $5,000.

Arno von Reinsperg, twenty-three years old, Wilmette, was killed when he lost control of an automobile and it went into a ditch in Dundee road, near Northbrook. He was a son of the late Hans von Reinsperg, former village trustee of Wilmette and a well known Chicago attorney.

Dr. Paul H. Yound, fifty years old, moderator of Illinois Congregational churches and pastor of the Elgin First Congregational church for the last six years, died at his home there of a heart ailment.

Phillip M. Chancellor, who in 1929 inherited a $6,000,000 estate from his grandfather, the late F. N. Mattlessen, zinc magnate of La Salle, was married in London to Elsa Klecker, daughter of a Hungarian merchant who died several years ago.

Asher Earl Bentley, thirty-five, arrested in Pontiac for manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Aline Younger, was free on $10,000 bond.

A threatened demonstration of the idle failed to materialize in Springfield as peace officers broke up small groups as they sought to reach the city's square and highway police prevented others from entering the city.

Cyril R. Jandus, attorney and former state senator, died in his home in Chicago. He was sixty-seven years old. Active in state politics for many years, Mr. Jandus was elected state representative in 1899 and later served four terms as state senator from the Fifteenth senatorial district.

Every family in the Ava relief zone gets a Bible as soon as it is placed on the charity list. These Bibles are donated by William Bowers, relief director of this district. He pays for the Bibles out of his own pocket, and says he is enabled to do this because he is persuaded that man does not live on bread alone.

Two miners were in jail and one was released on bond in Springfield under charges of unlawful manufacture and possession of explosives, while police sought solution to a series of bombings that has accompanied the coal mine union dispute.

GRAPHIC GOLF

J. H. TAYLOR'S PITCH SHOTS

J. H. TAYLOR's ability to "cut the feet" from under the ball on mashie shots opened up a new way to lower scores. Before his era golfers were quite content to get the ball on the green. But Taylor's method of making the cut shot was soon copied by many though few matched his ability. His pitch shots would drop the ball within the vicinity of the flag time and again, requiring but one putt to get down. Accurately sizing up the distance to the green, he would keep his eye on the ball and play for the flag. In 1914 Ouimet, visiting England, met Taylor and noticing his accurate mashie play to the pin, questioned him about his thoughts when playing this shot. Taylor made a characteristic reply. "I try to keep my eye on my ball first; then I attempt to pitch the ball into the hole on the fly."

Boyhood Dreams

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I LOOKED on in boyhood days, and Bill looked on the same, He to wealth and wealthy ways, and I to hills of fame. I have never climbed so far, nor he so much acquired, Here we were, and here we are, whatever we desired. Fate may treat us kindly yet, though fate so long delays. I may have my coronet, and he his wealthy ways. Then, I wonder, what the dream, and what the vision then, What the fairest thing will seem to be to musing men?

He may have a house of stone, to me a crown belong, He for riches may be known, and I for but a song. I may stand upon the hill and he amid the mart. Each according to his will, according to his heart. Yet of something we shall dream, when sitting there o' nights, Will it be a larger scheme, and be the greater heights? I may win a world of praise, he all the wealth there is— I'll look back to boyhood days, and he'll look back to his.

Rubber Check That Won't Bounce Back

MISS FRANCES HAYLIK of Akron, Ohio, is holding the world's largest check. It was made by the Goodyear Rubber company, and although partially made of rubber, it will not "bounce back" because it is reinforced with duralumin, the material used in making the framework of the Akron, new naval airship. The check is four feet long, 18 inches wide and weighs 15 pounds. The back of the check is rubber flooring, and after the check has figured in 100 transactions and bears 100 names of endorsers it will be taken to the bank to be cashed.

CHILDREN'S BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE CARELESSNESS OF JOHNNY CHUCK

THERE is a certain time when little folks, all kinds of little folks, are neither very little nor very big; they are half way between. But they don't feel half way between. Goodness, no! They feel quite grown up and all too often are quite sure that they know all there is to know. It is at that age that usually they get into the most trouble. No one can tell them anything.

And there is another age when people are no longer young, but have become set in their ways and find it difficult to learn new things, and are very sure of their opinions. Once more they are inclined to think that they know all there is to know. Now when any one, young or old, thinks he knows all there is to know you may be pretty sure that old Mr. Trouble is waiting for him just around the corner.

Johnny Chuck had been all through the first period. Of course, Johnny has grandchildren, if you must know. And While That Old Stone Wall Might Be a Protection in Some Ways, It Was a Decided Cause of Danger in Another Way.

Now Johnny was at that second period of knowing all there is to know. He wouldn't have liked it at all and would have indignantly said that it wasn't so if you had told him that this was the case. But the truth is he was set in his ways and because he had done certain things in certain ways for so long, he had come to think that those ways were the only ways. He had come to think that because Reddy Fox and Granny Fox and Old Man Coyote and Hooty the Owl never had caught him, they never would be able to. He considered himself so much smarter than they that he had nothing to fear from them.

Now, when any person, big person, middle-size person or little person, gets to thinking that way, carelessness is just bound to result. And so it was with Johnny Chuck. He intended to be just as watchful as ever. For new dangers he was as watchful as ever. But for old dangers he had so much contempt that he was careless.

When he had built that house down in the far corner of the Old Orchard he had made the entrance between the roots of an old apple tree and these roots made it impossible for Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote to dig him out if they wanted to. So there had been no need of a backdoor so far as they were concerned. No one ever had tried to dig him out there and he and Polly had lived with a delightful feeling of perfect security.

Very likely this was the reason that when he dug his new home up there by the dusty road he didn't think it necessary to dig a backdoor, although there wasn't anything under the sun to prevent any one digging him out who might want to. Johnny had got it in his head that because no one had tried to dig him out in the old home no one would try to dig him out of the new one. I suspect, too, that the fact that digging was harder work than it used to be for him had something to do with the matter. Anyway the fact is there was but one entrance to that new house, and any Chuck will tell you that to live that way is pure carelessness.

Then, too, Johnny hadn't stopped to think that while that old stone wall might be a protection in some ways, it was a decided cause of danger in another way. It gave enemies a chance to creep, unseen, right up behind him. But Johnny didn't think of this, where-

GOOD OLD RECIPES

WE LIKE to try recipes which our friends have cherished and handed down in the family for years. They may not appeal to all tastes, but it is a most commendable habit to cultivate a liking for all foods that are wholesome and well cooked.

Paprika Schnitzel.

Take small veal steaks—one for each serving—dip into flour and fry in butter after seasoning well. Mix one teaspoonful of paprika, one tablespoonful of flour, one and one-half cupfuls of sour cream and one-half cupful of stock. Strain over the meat and simmer fifteen minutes. Serve garnished with fried noodles.

Sauer Gedaupfetes Rindfleisch.

Take five pounds of lean beef from the rump, rub with salt, pepper and a teaspoonful of ground cloves, with one-half teaspoonful of allspice. Put into a stone crock and cover with good cider vinegar, one-half of a thinly sliced lemon, one onion cut into pieces and one bay leaf. Leave three or four days, turning several times so that all parts of the meat are well seasoned. Now wipe dry and place in a scotch kettle, add a little fat, cover and cook slowly as for a pot roast, using the vinegar for the liquid instead of water; add very little at a time. This is well liked sliced cold, but is usually served hot.

Cheese Pie.

Mash one cupful of cottage cheese and add two tablespoonfuls each of cream and butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, one egg, one teaspoonful of vanilla or the juice and rind of a lemon. Beat well and bake in a pastry-lined plate in a moderate oven.

Salmon Salad.

Take one can of flaked salmon, add one-half cupful of freshly grated coconut, three small pickles finely chopped, add a small amount of mayonnaise to hold together well and serve in curled leaves of head lettuce, masked with a generous spoonful of mayonnaise garnished with chopped, green olives.

In his shown once again how careless folks who are set in their ways may become.

For a third thing, Johnny had got it in his head that no one really dared attack him now that he was so big and strong. This also made him careless. He didn't begin to watch out for Reddy Fox as he used to when he was younger.

All these things Reddy Fox had discovered, and he and Mrs. Reddy grinned as they made their plans.

This lightweight cape-coat model is made of sudanette fabric in a fine pin-check design. The cape is detachable. The outfit is available in black and white, brown and white and navy and white.

Curls Are Order of Hour in the Newest Coiffures

Curls are again the "order of the hour for the woman of the moment," says Antoine, and he usually has the last word about the coiffure that the fashion spotlight picks out each season. Hair should be short, but not too short. His slogan is, "Fit your coiffure to your personality" and you will have distinction.

If your dressmaker has this same religion, you will evolve, when they have both finished with you, a creature fit for the pedestal about which human he-gods gather to give thanks and worship!

Recalling An Heroic Deed of 1898

Lieutenant
Richmond Pearson Hobson

Morro Castle

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE other day congress authorized the presentation of a medal of honor to a man who, as a lieutenant in the United States navy during the Spanish-American war, had won worldwide fame overnight. He was the Col. Lindbergh of his day. He was the leader of an expedition, the story of which thrilled the whole nation and put his name on the lips of every American. Of him the author of an article in a Boston magazine in September, 1898, said: "The Spartans who held the pass at Thermopylae may be forgotten, the 600 Englishmen who made the charge at Balaklava may go unsung, but in this land under the Stars and Stripes forever will linger the memory of the gritty Christian gentleman, Richmond Pearson Hobson of Alabama."

"Sic transit gloria mundi . . ." Indeed! For Richmond Pearson Hobson had to wait nearly 85 years for the official recognition of his deed and when it finally came, the newspapers, which had once emblazoned his name in streaming headlines, recorded the award of the medal of honor in a news story of only a few brief paragraphs.

Hobson was born at Greensboro, Ala., August 17, 1870. Educated in the Greensboro public schools and in the Southern university, he became interested in the navy during a visit to New Orleans and won an appointment to the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, from which he was graduated in 1889. In the academy he had devoted himself to naval construction and in 1891 he was made an assistant naval constructor with the rank of lieutenant, which he held at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war.

Just before Dewey's memorable victory at Manila bay in the Philippines a Spanish fleet consisting of four armored cruisers and three torpedo-boat destroyers, led by Admiral Cervera, left the Cape Verde islands for Cuban waters. Cervera succeeded in eluding the "Flying Squadron" of the United States navy, commanded by Commodore Schley, which had set out to find the enemy, and entered the harbor of Santiago in safety. Schley followed him to Santiago and established a blockade of the enemy fleet while awaiting the arrival of Captain Sampson, acting rear admiral and commander in chief of our naval forces, who was hurrying to Santiago with a fleet led by his flagship, the New York.

The story of how Hobson got his chance for fame is told by John R. Spears in his "History of Our Navy" as follows:

"After reaching Santiago and taking one look at the narrow entrance to the harbor the possibility of sinking a ship there to effectually close it, and so prevent Cervera's exit, was apparent to many of the officers of the squadron. Sampson, knowing the width of the channel, had considered the plan of sinking a ship in it . . . and in a dispatch dated May 27 had ordered Schley to sink the collier Sterling there, but Schley ignored the order. On the very day he reached Santiago, Sampson began to carry out the plan.

"There was the Merrimac. She had been sold to the government at a price twice her value. She was a bad ship—she could serve the nation much better in blocking the channel than in any other way, and preparations to sink her into the channel were immediately begun. At the earnest request of Mr. Richmond Pearson Hobson, assistant naval constructor, he was put in charge. He had been placed on the New York to watch her workings in actual war, and write a report thereon for the chief of his bureau. His knowledge of ships fitted him for the task and he had already showed his courage when he worked the range-finder on the New York during the bombardment of San Juan de Porto Rico. "About two hundred men were employed in stripping the Merrimac, for it was intended to send her in just before daylight next morning. However, after stripping her, it was necessary to fit her with torpedoes that would sink her instantly when the time came, and this took so long that day had arrived on June 2 before she was ready. Hobson was anxious to go then, but the admiral ordered him to wait.

"Meantime a crew of six men had been selected from among the hundreds that crowded aft to volunteer. They were Daniel Montague, chief master-at-arms of the New York; George Charette, gunner's mate, first class, of the New York; J. E. Murphy, coxswain on the Iowa; John P. Phillips, a machinist; Oscar Deignan, coxswain, and Francis Kelly, a water tender, all of the Merrimac. To this crew of six men Coxswain Rudolph Clausen of the New York added himself by eluding the vigilance of the officers . . .

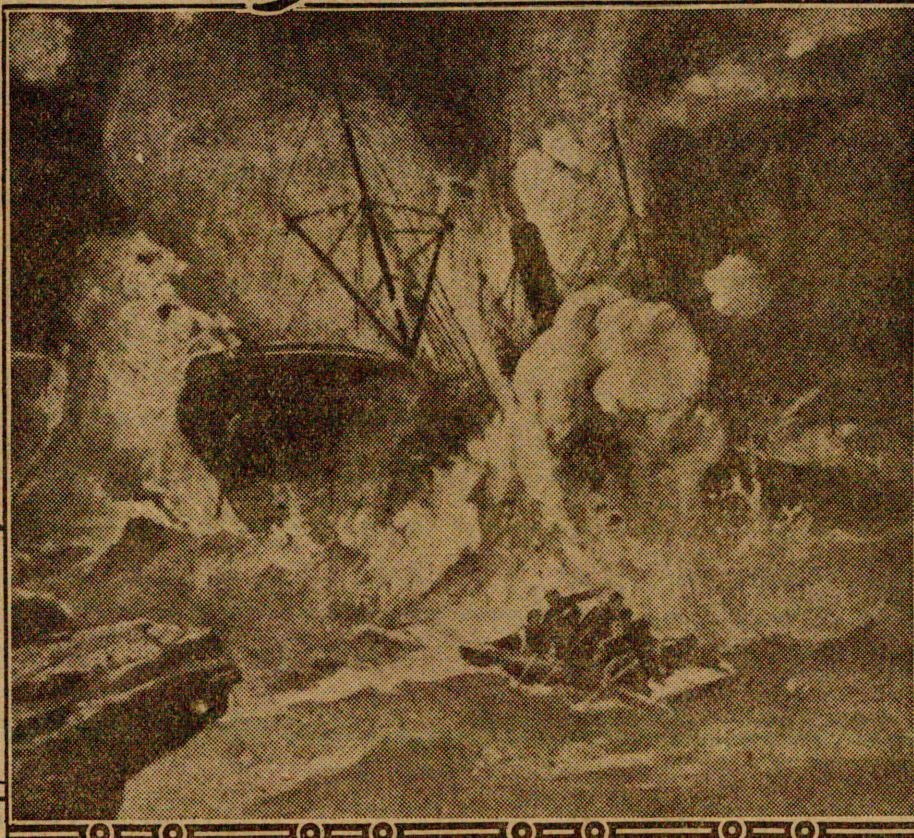

"At 3 o'clock on the morning of June 3 these men headed away for the harbor. A steam launch from the New York under Naval Cadet Joseph W. Powell followed to pick up the crew of the Merrimac, should they succeed in getting away from her after performing their work, in either the rowboat or the lifeboat that had been provided for them.

"It was a cloudy night, but because the channel was so narrow it was absolutely certain that the Merrimac would be discovered before she reached her destination, and that a heavy fire from the batteries of all kinds would enfold her, while the sentinels and the troops encamped along the shore were likely to spatter her deck with Mauser bullets as a tropical rain-storm would pelt her with drops of water. In short, there was not one chance in a thousand, apparently, for any of these men to live through that adventure and yet they had eagerly volunteered for it, and one had stowed himself away on board without permission! Nor was the chance of Cadet Powell and his men much better, for it was his duty to follow the Merrimac to the mouth of the harbor where he, too, would be as easy a target as the men on the ship, and there to wait until after daylight.

"Getting his bearings by the outlines of the Morro against the sky, Hobson drove the old ship into the center of the narrow channel. A hell of flame leaped out on both sides as she passed the Morro, while the Vizcaya, that was on guard just around the bend, began firing with her broadside battery. The Spaniards thought we were coming with our squadron to force the harbor, and all the guns, big and little, that would bear and many that would not, were fired with feverish rapidity. Immediately the shots began to reach the ship but no vital damage was done.

"Then the time to sink her had come, and Hobson pressed the electric button. Three of the torpedoes that were placed at her water-line exploded tearing open her sides. The man at the anchor cut it loose, bringing up her head just opposite the point, while her stern swung slowly around with the tide. It seemed for a moment that she must sink as they wished, right across the channel, but she filled so slowly, that she lay lengthwise of the channel and well at one side before she finally struck bottom."

Spears then quotes Hobson's narrative of the rest of the action as follows: "We were all aft, lying on the deck. Shells and bullets whistled around. Six inch shells from the Vizcaya came tearing into the Merrimac, crashing clear through, while the plunging shots from the fort broke through her decks.

The Sinking of the Collier Merrimac
From a Contemporary Drawing

"'Not a man must move!' I said; and it was only owing to the splendid discipline of the men that we were not all killed. We must lie there till daylight, I told them. Now and again one or the other of the men lying with his face glued to the deck and wondering whether the next shell would not come our way, would say 'Hain't we better drop off now, sir?' but I said 'Wait till daylight.' It would have been impossible to get the catamaran anywhere but on to the shore, where the soldiers stood shooting, and I hoped that by daylight we might be recognized and saved.

"It was splendid the way those men behaved. The fire of the soldiers, the batteries and the Vizcaya was awful. When the water came up on the Merrimac's decks the catamaran floated amid the wreckage, but she was still made fast to the boom, and we caught hold of the edges and clung on, our heads only being above water.

"At daylight the fire ceased and a Spanish launch came toward the wreck. We agreed to try capturing her and running for the open sea, but as she drew near a dozen Spanish marines aimed their Mausers at us and I saw that, in western parlance, they had the drop on us. 'Is there any officer in that boat to receive a surrender of prisoners of war?' I shouted. An old man leaned out under the awning and waved his hand. It was Admiral Cervera. The marines lowered their rifles and we were helped into the launch.

"Then we were put in cells in Morro castle. It was a grand sight a few days later to see the bombardment, the shells striking and bursting around El Morro. Then we were taken into Santiago. I had the court martial room in the barracks. My men were kept prisoners in the hospital."

In his prison Hobson was visited by Spanish officers who asked permission to shake his hand and congratulate him for his courage. At his request a message was sent to Admiral Sampson, telling the commander that he and his men were safe and, except for minor wounds of two, Kelly and Murphy, that they had come through their terrible experience unscathed.

At first the Spanish authorities refused to exchange the prisoners. But at last on July 6 Hobson and his men were marched blindfolded through the Spanish lines to a place halfway between the Spanish trenches and the American lines and the formalities of exchange were completed by Spanish and American officers under a big ceiba tree.

Even before Hobson's release from prison the news of his deed had made him the man of the hour in America. So when he was sent up to New York with instructions to report to the secretary of the navy at Washington on the condition of the Spanish ships wrecked in the battle of Santiago which followed soon after his exploit, he was given such an ovation as no man, since his time, except Colonel Lindbergh, has known.

Next followed the "kissing bee" which made him almost as famous as his deed in Santiago harbor. At Long Beach in August, 1898, a St. Louis girl asked permission to kiss the Merrimac hero and he, blushing, gave permission. After that—the deluge! Wherever he went, hundreds of women mobbed him for the privilege of paying their osculatory respects.

Other honors came to him rapidly. Alabama, his native state, was the first to propose giving him a jeweled sword. He was raised ten numbers in the ranks of naval constructors and was made a captain. For more than a year he enjoyed the hero worship of the nation. Then the fickle public began to forget him when the newspapers ceased to chronicle his every movement.

He was put in charge of raising the wrecks of Spanish ships and in the course of this duty he went to China to superintend the repairing of the Spanish ships sunk by Dewey at Manila. While there he began having trouble with his eyesight and he asked to be retired from active service. By this time the newspapers and the public had definitely turned against him. His heroism at Santiago was either forgotten or minimized. His request to be retired was denied and in 1903 he resigned his commission.

After his retirement he began making speeches throughout the country advocating a large navy and as early as 1902 he predicted the World war which came 12 years later. In 1906 he was elected to congress from his home district in Alabama and during his eight years in congress he served on the committee on naval affairs. Since his retirement from congress he has devoted his time to the cause of prohibition and to fighting the spread of the use of narcotics.

Lesson for March 26

REVIEW: JESUS OUR EXAMPLE IN SERVICE.

GOLDEN TEXT—How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him. Acts 10:38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories of Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows Us How.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living Like Jesus. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Our Example in Service.

The method of review must always be determined by the genius of the teacher, the grade of the class, and the aptitude of the pupils. Three methods for the Senior, Young People and Adult classes are suggested, the second and third of which are adaptations of the method suggested by the Lutheran Lesson committee.

I. The Summary Method. In the use of this method the principal facts of each lesson will be brought out with the leading teachings. Assignments should be made a week in advance.

II. The Key Note of the First Six Chapters of Mark From Which the Lessons of the Quarter Have Been Taken.

Chapter 1: Jesus as the Gospel Preacher. His preparation was in the wilderness alone with God. It was in Galilee that he called his first disciples and began to preach. While the synagogue was the best place, naturally when the leaders became hostile, the desert, the mountain, and even a fishing boat was his pulpit.

Chapter 2: Jesus as the Teacher. He gave them a new conception of the forgiveness of sins, fasting, and the Sabbath.

Chapter 3: Jesus as the Messiah. He chose twelve of his ambassadors, being somewhat analogous to the twelve tribes in the old dispensation.

Chapter 4: Jesus as the Interpreter of the Kingdom of God. Three outstanding parables reveal its characteristics.

Chapter 5: Jesus as the Great Physician. The healing of the demoniac, the woman with the issue of blood, restoring to life of the daughter of Jairus are outstanding examples.

Chapter 6: Jesus as the Greater Provider. An outstanding example of his ability to provide for the disciples is seen in the feeding of the five thousand.

III. A Method Which Embraces the Grouping of the Quarter's Lessons Under Significant Headings.

1. Some helpers of Jesus (Lessons 1 and 6). The helpers indicated are John the Baptist who is the first recorded helper, and the twelve apostles. It is strikingly significant that though Jesus possessed all power he chose to place in the hands of ordinary men the continuance of his work. He is able to use men of varied gifts and temperaments, as shown in the twelve.

2. Some works of Jesus (Lessons 2, 3 and 4). He met and overcame the Devil in the wilderness. He cast out demons. He healed the sick and he forgave sins.

3. Some teachings of Jesus (Lessons 5, 7 and 8). Because the traditions of the Jews had obscured the law, he taught the higher meaning of the law, especially as it pertained to the Sabbath. By means of parables, he took the common things of life and clothed them with vital and profound significance.

4. The power of Jesus (Lessons 9, 10 and 11). This power was exhibited over the forces of nature, demons, physical ailments, and even death itself.

5. An enemy of Jesus (Lesson 12). The Devil is the supreme enemy of Jesus. Anything that hinders the progress of the gospel may be considered as an enemy. In this light he has many enemies, among which may be mentioned alcohol and narcotics. The drinking of intoxicating liquors and smoking of cigarettes, etc., dull man's moral and spiritual natures and incapacitate him for the highest and most efficient service.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

The world crowns success; God crowns faithfulness.

It is better that we know "The Rock of Ages" than "the age of rocks."

He that will be angry, and not sin, must not be angry but for sin.—John Trapp.

In spite of what God knows about us, and that is more than we know about ourselves, he loves us.—Revelation.

Though I am always in haste, I am never in a hurry.—John Wesley.

"Religion does not consist in being good; that is only a result, religion is knowing God."

"Revival would break out if we Christians got rid of sin in our lives."—Bishop Linton.

We praise God at intervals with our words, but our whole life should be a ceaseless song of praise to him.—Augustine.

YOUTHFUL NATURALIST

At the age of thirteen a boy in the Ozarks, Guy Greenwell, Joplin, Mo., can identify 750 birds and animals from pictures, and describe their habits, says a writer in the Golden Age. He is in great demand every summer as an instructor of Boy Scout and Y. M. C. A. groups and is able to answer immediately and learnedly about 98 per cent of all the questions put to him regarding bird life. His father is in the poultry business, and the boy himself seems to be a natural-born enthusiast on bird life in all its aspects.

When CHILDREN

—don't gain weight
—don't grow strong
—don't keep well

The stomach is not to blame when a child is finicky about food. Nor is every sluggish girl or boy constipated. Instead of a lot of medicine, give a little pure syrup of figs. You'll see a change in twenty-four hours! In a couple of weeks, your youngster will have the appetite of a young animal!

It's true, mothers, for it's Nature. California syrup of figs is bottled health for the little ones.

Pale, sickly children whose tongues are always coated, and who are never really hungry, are suffering from stasis. That means a sluggish colon; a colon clogged with waste. They need the "California treatment." You can give this treatment yourself, any time, anywhere; it's simple. Every druggist has California syrup of figs all bottled, with full directions for a babe of two years or child in his teens. Its delicious taste makes it delightful to use; no child ever tired of it.

Start tonight, giving enough to cleanse the colon of every bit of poisonous waste. Then a spoonful or so, every other day, until the child's appetite, color, weight, and general health tell you all sluggishness or constipation has been conquered.

When a cold or severe sickness has sapped a child's strength and stamina, remember California syrup of figs.

If you want to get real results, get the real California syrup of figs. Do not accept any bottle which does not say CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs.

MOKENA

Mrs. Adolph Steen underwent an operation for the removal of a fiber tumor in the Norwegian American hospital in Chicago last Monday.

Mrs. E. P. Krapp attended a Board meeting of the Woman's Union of the North Illinois District of the Evangelical church in Mokena Wednesday.

The ladies serving last Thursday afternoon at the St. John Woman's Union monthly coffee were: Mesdames Caroline Marti, Ida Hauck, Francis Braun, Alma Steen, Amelia Lorenzen, Florence Yunker, Edna Young, and Frank Sievert. There was a splendid attendance. During the program following the serving Little Marjorie Marti spoke a piece entitled, "Marjorie Me". A trio was sung by Gertrude Sipple, Helen Capel and Bernice Muehler. Miss Mildred Doig, primary teacher of the Mokena public school favored with several pleasing readings.

The society is sending eggs to the Bensonville orphanage and all who intend to contribute eggs are asked to either take them to the church or to the home of Mrs. John Mattes, who is chairman of that committee, the first week in April.

Two christenings took place Sunday afternoon at one o'clock in St. Mary's Catholic church when the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Jacobs and Mr. and Mrs. Willis Hall, both parties being of Mokena were baptised by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Father Roman.

The sponsors for the Jacobs baby were Miss Alice Horras of Mokena and Mr. Jack O'Brien of Chicago, the name given the child being Robert John Jacobs. Mrs. John Horras grandmother of the baby entertained the following guests at a four course dinner at 4:30, covers being laid for twenty-four: Beside the Horras family, Mrs. Ralph Hogge and daughter Jeanie; Mr. and Mrs. James Hogge and daughter Phyllis; Mr. R. McNamara, Mr. Jack O'Brien and daughter Rita and son Jack and Mr. Sam Williams, all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. P. McGee and son Edward of Blue Island; Miss Elizabeth Rinke and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler and daughters, Adeline and Ada of Mokena, and the Rev. Father Roman of Joliet.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent and a picture of all the guests was taken.

The sponsors for the Hall baby were Miss Madeline Wachter and Robert Welch of Joliet, the name given the baby being John Arthur Hall. Mrs. Andrew Wachter, grandmother of the baby entertained at 2 o'clock at a four course dinner in her home the following guests: Beside the Wachter family Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hall, Mrs. Stokes Nebeker and daughter Virginia; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hayden and son Don, Mr. and Mrs. James Raffauf and son Junior, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hentsch, Mr. and Mrs. Entwistle and daughter Dorothy, all of Mokena; Mr. and Mrs. Neal Stoll and Mr. and Mrs. A. Lee of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Welch and daughter Patsy and son Bob of Joliet. The afternoon and evening was spent in music and dancing.

SCHOOL NEWS

The average attendance for the Will County rural schools during February according to Miss Hazel Cowell Will County Truant Officer, was 93.07%, as compared with an average attendance in the Mokena school of 96.55%, showing that the Mokena school had an average attendance of 3.48% higher than the rural schools of Will County during February.

Loan Application

Regulations for 1933 governing crop production loans have been issued by the Secretary of Agriculture and are now available to farmers in this county upon request to Charles Steinberg, Field Inspector of the Crop Producing Loan Office. Mr. Steinberg's office is in the Farm Bureau at the County Seat.

The maximum permitted to one borrower this year is $300; or, in the case of tenants, the total of all loans to tenants of any one landlord with in a single county cannot exceed $1200. The actual amount advanced by the authorities will depend upon the borrowers requirements. A first lien or mortgage on the crop will be required. The regulations require that loans be repaid on or before October 31, 1933. Interest at five and one half per cent deducted in advance will be charged. All applications must be filed by April 30th, 1933 the closing date for receiving applications.

Hundreds
are helping wash these clothes...

IN THE OLD DAYS women washed alone. Every week they spent arduous hours bent over a washboard, scrubbing dirt loose from grimy clothes... twisting out rinse water with arms that ached.

But modern wash-days are different. Home laundries are now equipped with electric washing machines that hum as they work. A switch is snapped—and clothes are quickly swished clean in hot sudsy water that hands hardly have to touch. Another switch starts a motor-driven wringer to turning! Washing isn't a day-long ordeal any more. It's easy to have everything out blowing on the line in two short hours.

SPECIAL DURING MARCH

We're featuring two outstanding washing machine values this month—the new Conlon and the new Thor. Both have firm-but-gentle agitator action, modern swinging wringers, easy-to-clean enamel tubs and many other features. Specially priced during March at only $49.50 $2.50 down and $4.20 a month—cash, only

AT PUBLIC SERVICE STORES AND OTHER LOCAL DEALERS

"Behind the scenes" of this modern home laundry is an interesting picture. Actually, hundreds of men are helping with the washing. A complicated system of service is operating. Conveyors are feeding tons of crushed coal into boilers. Powerful turbines are roaring. Miles of copper wire, deep underground and high overhead, are alive with electricity. Turn a switch any time, day or night, and this electricity goes instantly to work for you.

In the average home in northern Illinois it costs just a fraction over a cent to run a washing machine for an hour. And electricity speeds through other once-tedious chores just as economically—sweeps carpets for less than a penny an hour—irons clothes for less than a nickel an hour. It toasts bread, bakes waffles, heats chilly corners, brings bright cheerful light to every room for a trifling sum.

In spite of the great variety of uses to which it is put in every home, the cost of this electric service is only a small portion of your family budget. Have you ever tried to figure where else you can get more comfort and convenience?

ORLAND PARK

Village politics are very quiet this year in Orland Park. Only one ticket is in the field. No candidate has filed for police magistrate.

Ralph Miller who has been in the U. S. Coast Guard Service, has been mustered out of the service and arrived home the past week unexpectedly. His mother, Mrs. F. Miller was very much surprised to see him.

Mr. Miller was injured sometime ago when he fell from a mast on a ship. He was in a hospital for some time and after recovering was mustered out of the service at Mobile, Alabama, from there he went to Los Angeles, California and was there during the recent earthquake. He saw a large building topple to the ground as the earth was rocked by a quake. He saw a large stone fall from a building and crush a man to death. He described the scenes following the quake as terrifying.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Quigley returned Monday from Shelbyville, Illinois, where they had attended the funeral of her father who died last Friday.

The dance sponsored by the Orland Park Volunteer Fire Department at the Palos Club House on St. Patrick's day night was a big success in every way. The Orland Firemen put it over again!

The sleet storm did not do much damage in this section, altho on 159th street several electric line poles were snapped off by the load of ice covered wires.

Ralph Agate and George Munch who have been in Arizona for some time, returned home Tuesday. They report a wonderful time and trip.

Neighbors Day at

Orland Park M. E. Church

The Forward Movement program which is bringing to pass steadily and surely a religious Renaissance in the minds and hearts of the members and friends of the Orland M. E. church climaxed its third week of activity on Sunday, March 19th, with a service very aptly termed "Neighbors Day".

According to plan, the community was systematically canvassed. Official visitors were designated to call upon their neighbors and invite them to attend the service. Just like in the "Family Day Service" of the previous week where all the members of a family sat with their own family group so was this service planned to bring neighbors side by side with neighbors in common worship. The various pews designated by placards the names of the different streets or sections of the community and a worshiper from Oak street would be invited to set in the Oak street pew or the Main street neighbor with his other neighbors in the Main street pew. The Orland church had a capacity congregation assembled when the Processional hymn was sung.

The text for the sermon, so fittingly chosen by the pastor, was from the 7th chapter of St. Matthew, that grand climax of Christ's sermon in the Mount wherein the Master reproved rash judgment, exhorted to prayer, and that His hearers be not merely hearers, but doers of the Word. "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

As neighbors, said the pastor, we should not pass rash judgment on our neighbors frailties. We should seek out, not their faults to judge but rather their virtues to applaud. Encourage the good and pray for the faults. Do not look for the mote in your neighbor's eye without first having cast out the beam in your own. Love your neighbor and be charitable to him for Charity or Love, suffereth long and is kind. We may have Faith, we may have Hope, but the greatest of these is Love or Charity.

This sermon, dynamically powerful in its delivery by the pastor could not but help entering into the hearts and souls of his hearers and many a man and many a woman in the congregation took home with them a new conception of the meaning of the word "Neighbor."

The music was by the choir under the direction of Mrs. George Gee, was inspiring and beautiful and formed a gracious background for the glowing words of the pastor's sermon.

Sunday, March 26th will mark the fourth service under the Forward Movement Plan. It has been designated "Symphony Day." On that day, it is the thought of the pastor that music through which so many of the highest and purest thoughts of man may be expressed, or the means by which we may praise the Lord and exalt His name. Come, and join with us in acknowledging and praising the Lord in music and in song on "Symphony Day Sunday."

Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs held an all day conservation institute, March 20th, under the management of Mrs. L. Gray, in the Wedgewood room of Marshall Field and Co.

The morning meeting was given over to the district chairman of Illinois. The second district chairman reported the planning and naming of the outer drive in Chicago. The name chosen was "Axel Bond Drive", in commemoration of the first governor of the state. Mrs. Jacobs of the third district reported planting of pine trees at Oak Forest, building of bird houses by school children, marring of trails in Palos Woods; Beautifying the Western Ave., highway at Beverly with shrubs on embankments. The tenth district chairman reported the preservation and protection of the Lotus beds in Fox Lake.

Miss Marchmont of the forestry department of the state of Wisconsin and Mrs. LaBude chairman of conservation of the state of Wisconsin gave interesting talks on the work done in the state of Wisconsin to reclaim waste lands. After a delightful luncheon the meeting was again called to order.

Mr. H. N. Wheeler public lecturer of the United States forestry department gave an address on reforestation illustrated by slides. Mrs. John Humphrey conservation chairman of Orland Park Woman's club attended and had as her guests, Mrs. Ella Loebe, president, and Mrs. W. R. Schussler, treasurer. In spite of the bad weather these ladies had a very enjoyable and interesting day.

The Orland Park achievement club play "Safety First" made a big hit.

The ticket sale amounted to forty-one dollars and fifty-five cents. The candy and popcorn sale amounted to six dollars and fifty-five cents.

Many relatives from out of town were there and complimented on it. The furniture was furnished by the children's parents.

The achievement club thanks the Methodist Episcopal church for the kind loan of their chairs which were sorely needed for the large attendance.

First Moth of Spring

One day one of the children in our room found a cocoon. We kept it about two months. Two days ago the moth came out. It is a big moth. It is not the kind that eat clothes. It looks like a large butterfly but the difference is that the moth has a feather like antenna but the butterfly has a knob on the end of the antennae. The moth flies at night, while the butterfly flies during the day. Our moth has just eaten some grass. We are going to make a cage for him. When it gets warm we will let him go. He is white, brown and red. He has big wings and a beautiful body.

For the Nation's Health

THE twenty-sixth annual conventions of the National Canners Association, the Canning Machinery and Supplies Association and the National Food Brokers Association will be held at the Hotel Stevens in Chicago from January twenty-third to January twenty-seventh. The main object of these conventions is not, as one would think, to discuss ways and means of selling more canned foods, but to devise new ways and exchange the latest information on how to can better and still better foods to sell.

For there is no doubt about the acceptance of canned foods as a large part of their diet by the vast majority of the American public. And the only way to make this acceptance continue and to increase the amount of canned foods consumed is to show that they are surrounded by every safeguard in the making and to study ways of improving them year after year.

Scientists Speak

That is why scientists so often supplant captains of industry at the speakers' table at these conventions. That is why such leaders in the nutritional field as Dr. E. F. Kohman, Miss Alice Blinn, Professor F. C. Gaylord, Dr. D. M. Doty, Dr. J. R. Esty, Professor J. H. MacGillivray, Charles G. Woodbury, Karl F. Kellerman, Ruth Atwater, Professor Sybil Woodruff, Dr. Walter H. Eddy and Miss Lita Bane addressed packed meetings at this convention last year. These conventions which are attended by several thousand canners and brokers are a vast effort to promote the nation's health.

Suburban Area

Organization Is

Non-Political

The following statement was issued by the executive committee of the Suburban Area and Country Towns Association at their meeting as a result of rumors that propaganda was being used in certain localities in the county against those who have been identified with the Suburban Area and Country Towns association movement in the cause of home rule:

The Suburban Area and Country Towns Association of Cook County, Inc., is not in any sense a political organization. It was not designed for the advancement of any party and the leaders of both the major political parties are to be found in its membership.

The association does not take any part in the local campaigns that are being waged for office and it will not violate the principles of its constitution by either openly or privately endorsing or seeking the election of any person to any office in the various municipalities that are members of the association.

However, the association does desire to warn the citizens of the Suburban Area and Country Towns that certain outside interests are seeking to inject the influence of Chicago finance and politics into the local situations in the hope that those friendly to Metropolitan measures might be placed in authority in some of the country communities. The supporters of the cause of home rule should closely watch this effort in their own community and stamp it out wherever it appears.

It does wish to make clear, however, that the charges that are being made in some sections that members of the executive committee of this association are seeking to set up a metropolitan form of government in Cook county, are absolutely and unqualifiedly false. That is exactly what the organization does not want, and its membership has been wholeheartedly unanimous upon this point.

The organization and the individual members thereof are doing everything in their power to prevent any legislation that will in the slightest degree savor of consolidation of governmental functions in the suburban area and country towns.

These members have sought to show that any semblance of partial consolidation is merely the opening wedge toward absolute and complete consolidation. And the fact that the metropolitan plan as a whole has been abandoned in the General Assembly and that these bills are being presented to take away local authority bit by bit instead of all at once makes the battle a more complicated one. The citizens of every community are therefore warned against any attempt to even intimate that the Suburban Area group is not working for the best interests of every community to aid it in retaining its political integrity and its right to govern itself on all matters of purely local concern. Such attempts are false and without a scintilla of evidence to prove them.

In the effort to preserve home rule for Cook county towns party lines have been obliterated and it has been the hope of all to cement all the citizens of Cook County outside of Chicago in a solid phalanx against the encroachment upon their rights as individual communities.

This organization has constantly striven to show that not one of the members of the association has by the slightest word or deed, either publicly or privately, been encouraged to make political capital out of their connection with the organization, and the organization leaders have heard of no such effort anywhere up to the present time. Many of the men who are closely identified with the organization are candidates for office in their respective communities but have sacrificed valuable time in their own campaigns to the interests of the cause of home rule as embodied in this association.

FRANKFORT

The Ladies Aid of St. Peter's Evangelical church will hold their monthly meeting and birthday "coffee" Thursday afternoon and evening, March 30. A program will be given and also the orchestra will render several selections.

Charles Holstein has received word from his brother Arthur who resides at Long Beach, California, that he and his wife escaped injury in the recent severe earthquake shocks which visited that region.

Mr. Conrad Sippel of Frankfort has received word from his daughters Mrs. Wilbur Myers and Mrs. E. H. Koerner residing in Los Angeles, California that they escaped injury in the earthquake but that the rear wall of the Koerner home was shaken down by the temblor.

Edward Haake of Homewood was a guest in the Charles Pfeifer home on Tuesday.

Work on the E. J. & E., and Michigan Central railroad subways has been started. Workmen are putting in the steel supports.

Mrs. Charles Pfeifer who has been ill the past four months is improving.

Mrs. Lawrence Lorenzen entertained a number of Ladies Wednesday at a quilting party.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nordstrom had as their guests last Sunday their son and family from Roseland.

Miss Evelyn Hossbach is spending this week in Joliet with friends.

Miss Evelyn Pfeifer of Joliet spent Sunday here with the home folks.

On Palm Sunday the following class will be confirmed at the St. Peter Evangelical church by Rev. FOUND!

the "hidden quart" THAT STAYS UP IN YOUR MOTOR AND NEVER DRAINS AWAY

...Mechanic Elder Schaffner Found the Hidden Quart... Also that Without it, Motors Show 50% to 60% Greater Wear... So He Switched to Conoco

* The Germ Process (exclusive Conoco patent) imparts to this motor oil that peculiar ability to penetrate and combine with metal surfaces. Of the first filling about one quart will "hide" itself up in your motor's precious working parts. This hidden quart never drains away. It becomes a part of the motor itself, worth its weight in gold.

MECHANIC SCHAFFNER REPORTS ON DISCOVERY:

"I never did believe what Conoco Germ Processed oil would do; not until an Essex owner, with 25,000 miles on his speedometer, asked me to check his motor and put in new parts where necessary. It surely surprised me; clearance of pistons was only four 1-thousandths; of bearings only three 1-thousandths of an inch.

"This owner said he had used Conoco Germ Processed oil since the car was new. I have overhauled many another Essex at 25,000 miles, which has not used this oil, and found the wear 50% to 60% greater. Now I recommend Conoco Germ Processed Oil to my friends, and have changed to it in my own car."—Elder Schaffner, Highland, Ill.

Stop Cruel Motor Wear . . . Escape its Painful Cost

Don't Wait Another Day to Drain and Refill With Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil

Try a motor, lack of lubrication is cruelty indeed. You are too "humane" to permit it, if only you knew the truth. But motors suffer in silence till costly damage is done. Then you pay . . . and pay . . . and pay.

50% of motor wear occurs in the moments following a cold start. Ordinary oil drains back into the crankcase and leaves the motor dry, till it is pumped back up again. Not so, with Conoco's hidden quart. It stays up in the motor and never drains away.

This is proved. Even with the crankcase empty, due to accident, users of this oil have driven many miles, without damage, on the "hidden quart" alone.

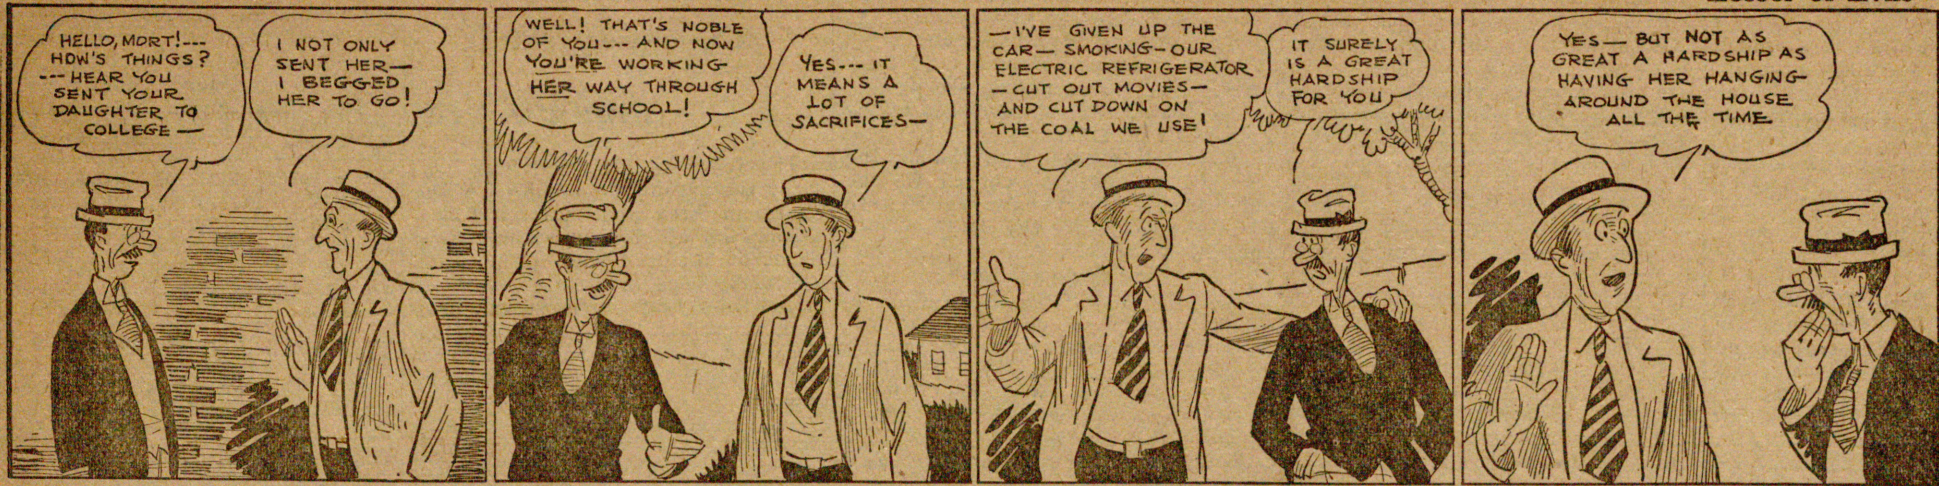

Isn't it smart and thrifty to have a "hidden quart" up in the parts of your motor, where you are sure it cannot fail? It is so simple to be safe! so foolhardy to be in doubt. Tend to it today. Go now, drain and refill with the "hidden-quart" oil. Do it for safety's sake.

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Peyton, senior at the southern university of Marland, resents Paterson Thayer's attentions to Ivy Welch, seventeen-year-old coed, and there is a stormy scene, ending with bitter recriminations, the tension being increased by Max Vernon, another student, long Thayer's friend, reproaching Ivy for "breaking a date" with him. Thayer and Vernon threaten each other.

CHAPTER II

Larry Welch, Bachelor of Arts, Marland—1928, and candidate for a Master's degree, sat at his desk in Academic hall facing rows of empty benches. From the outside came the drone of a campus gone lazy, and Larry leaned back in his chair, half closed his eyes, and gave himself over to the luxury of formless—but delicious—thoughts.

One more month and he'd have his Master's degree. One more month and his connection with Marland would be officially severed. Today of all days it came to Larry Welch most poignantly that he was sorry.

For five years his life had been lived on the Marland campus. Until the preceding June there had been showered upon him all the calcium glare that a great athlete and an outstanding student can receive in a small, intimate and prideful college.

He was not a large man. At no time had Larry ever weighed more than a hundred and sixty-five. A casual observer would have considered him well formed, but rather inclined to slenderness; never suspecting the powerful muscular development beneath his loose-fitting clothes; nor the superb synchronization of those muscles with a keen and alert brain.

Nor was he handsome in a classic sense. Like his sister, Ivy, he was intensely blond—rather Norse in type. His cheeks were pink and boyish; his eyes the blue of a spring sky.

Every person in college was Larry's friend, or wanted to be. The freshmen who took English from him this year adored him. Frankly, he considered himself a rather poor teacher and was delighted that his freshmen liked him so well that they studied reasonably hard and did not confront him with the horror of flunking anyone. There wasn't a boy or girl of them who wouldn't—and didn't—work his head off for Fessor Welch.

But Commencement marked the end. Today that idea struck Larry more forcibly than ever before. While the weather was bleak and damp, Commencement had seemed far away; now that summer had burst suddenly upon the campus, it seemed that the end was upon him. He almost regretted his refusal of an offer from the president that would carry with it the position of assistant football coach and associate professor. Yet he knew that he dared not let sentiment sway him.

He was twenty-three years of age. In the city of Birmingham a good job awaited him; a job offering him enough salary to live well, save a trifle—and plan for the future; the last being something which Larry most ardently desired to do.

The future . . . the prospect was delightfully linked with visions of a home and a girl . . . a girl slim and straight and vividly brunette; a girl whom he had known for three marvelous years and who was the envy of Marland if for no other reason than that she had won the affection of the great Larry Welch.

And even as Larry thought of her, the door opened and Tony Peyton entered the room abruptly.

She stood framed in the doorway, an exquisite little figure, her big, black eyes shining into his, an eager smile on her sensitive lips. He gazed at her idolatry for the full period of time it took the mellow chimes of the old clock in the tower of the main building to toll twelve. Noon! Noon of May day!

It was the girl who broke the spell. She closed the door leading into the corridor and advanced toward his desk. He was smiling eagerly as he rose to greet her.

"Believe it or not," he challenged: "I was just thinking of you, Tony."

She flushed at the declaration in his eyes. She put both her hands in his and he pressed them tightly.

"I wish I loved you less, Tony."

"Why?"

"I'd kiss you."

For an instant the roguish smile which he so loved played across her lips. But it was gone almost as soon as it appeared and the face she turned up to his was very, very serious.

"Have you a class this hour, Larry?"

"No."

"Where can we talk?"

"Here. Nobody's likely to bother us—in a classroom on such a day as this."

He took her chin in his hand and turned her head this way and that, regarding her quizzically. "Why the misery?"

She shook her head and seated herself on one of the benches.

"Sit next to me, Larry. I want to have you close when I talk—without the necessity of looking straight at you."

"Sweet suffering tomatoes! I never had that one pulled before."

"I'm serious—I mean I want to talk seriously."

"Oh, shuh! Tony—this is no day for melancholy. Forget what's eating you and let's thresh it out tomorrow. What say? Let's grab my flivver and take the air for an hour. Lord knows no healthy person has the right to stay indoors on this sort of a day."

She pressed his hand. "Trying to snap me out of it, aren't you, Larry? Good scout! But it's no go. We're in for a talk."

He settled himself beside her. "Fire when ready. But there's nothing in the world to justify such seriousness."

"Yes, there is. Plenty."

"Convince me. If it's anything about this job they've offered me here—"

"It isn't, Larry. It isn't about you at all."

"No-o. . . ." He glanced at her out of the corners of his eyes and felt a premonition of trouble. This wasn't the Tony he knew. Usually she had a laugh on her lips; was ready with quick repartee . . . seemed to look upon life with a smile. But now the cameo face was set in lines which bordered on sternness: Larry received the impression that she was older than himself—a thing manifestly absurd. There was trouble reflected in those fine eyes. . . . Her first words, which came hesitatingly, bore out his fear.

"Something's wrong, Larry; awfully wrong. I've got to talk it out with you."

He fell in with her mood. "All right, Tony. Let's have it. You know dog-gone well if there's anything I can do—"

"I Wish I Loved You Less, Tony."

"I know. That's why I came to you. At any rate, it's one of the reasons."

"And the other?"

"Because. . . ." She hesitated, then took the plunge bravely. "Well, it's about Ivy."

He straightened. "My sister?"

She nodded, and something in her manner caused a look of worry to dawn in his own eyes. Not even Tony quite fathomed the depth of affection which existed between Larry Welch and his sister.

"What about Ivy?"

Tony turned in her seat until she faced Larry directly.

"I can talk straight, can't I?"

"You know you can. As a matter of fact, I've never known you to do anything else. You've got me a trifle scared."

"I want to," she said simply.

"Ivy's in trouble?"

"Yes . . . and no. That is, Larry, she isn't now—but she may be, unless something is done. I'm mixed up in it, too. You'll most likely hear from Ivy about it . . . and I thought I'd better come to you first."

For the moment his thoughts were all of the kid sister whom he adored.

"What's wrong, Tony?"

She met his eyes levelly.

"How do you like Pat Thayer?"

He hesitated, and shook his head.

"Not particularly," he admitted.

"He isn't the sort of man you'd pick for Ivy, is he?"

"No-o. Not if I were doing the picking."

"Well—Ivy is in love with him!"

"With Pat Thayer?"

"Yes. And she thinks she is engaged to him."

He took Tony's arm and leaned close. "Is that what has been worrying you, Tony? Is that what you came here to see me about?"

"Yes. . . ."

And quite suddenly he threw back his head and laughed. He laughed softly, but with tremendous relief.

"Gosh! What a goose you are! Ivy's nobody's fool. She can take care of herself."

Tony bit her lip. She spoke in a hard little voice.

"You refuse to worry about it, Larry?"

"Sure, I do. Even my sister has got to cut her eyeteeth some time, and so—"

The color drained from the girl's cheeks.

"I'm afraid, then," she said in a hard little voice, "that I've got to tell you more than I intended."

She hesitated, but only for a second. Then, without looking at her companion, she told of the scene in the Bower—of Pat Thayer and Ivy Welch, of her intrusion and of the bitterness which had followed. Larry listened attentively, reserving comment.

He was more concerned about Tony than about his sister.

"You're worried about Ivy?" he asked when she had finished.

"Yes."

"Because Pat Thayer doesn't seem to be the right sort of fellow?"

"It's because I know he isn't."

He shook his head and a slow, tolerant smile played about his lips.

"I'm afraid you're not fair to Thayer," he said. "We understand, of course, that ugly rumors followed him to Marland. But nothing was ever substantiated. Now listen, Tony: I'm going to be honest with you. I think you've gone off the deep end. We're friends and Ivy is my sister. You forget that she's a kid girl just like any one of a hundred other freshmen coeds. Perhaps it's better that she picked a man like Pat Thayer for her first love affair. I reckon every girl has to go through that once—an infatuation for a man older than herself. I'll admit frankly that I don't know anything against him, and—"

"How has he been living since he came to Marland?" she questioned abruptly.

Larry frowned. "You mean the Max Vernon thing?"

"Exactly. It's common knowledge, Larry, that Thayer has bled Vernon of every cent he had. They've played cards for big money . . . and Max has lost. Have you watched that kid in the past few months? Up to last fall you never saw him that he wasn't grinning. But now . . . he's older, and he's serious. Every one knows that he's broke."

"Isn't that Vernon's lookout? But you're accepting rumor as fact. We don't know that Pat has been trimming Vernon."

"Trimming! Stealing his money, you mean. Of course, we don't know it. But the whole college is pretty sure. And now he's gone out after Ivy. He seems to take a perverse delight in making Vernon miserable now that he's got his money. Max is crazy about Ivy."

"Sure he is. And he's a nice kid. But I've got no right to tell my sister whom she shall run with. She's got a good head on her shoulders, Tony; a darned good head. I'm fond of her and I think she likes me pretty well. But she wouldn't stand for it a minute if I chased after her telling her what she must and mustn't do. Now listen—"

He faced her once again and took one of her hands in his: "Something has run off with your nanny. You've magnified nothing into something terrible . . . and you're all wrong. I don't hold any brief for Thayer, but I do say that until we know something we have no right to butt into his relationships with any girl on the campus—even if that girl is Ivy. Let's forget it, Tony."

She rose and walked to the window. Her figure was outlined in the brilliant sunlight and Larry Welch stared at her curiously. Here was a girl he didn't know at all; a girl gripped by a resentment which he could not understand.

Tony looked out across the campus. It was all so peaceful and quiet; the stage was so magnificently set for gentle romance untintured by grimness. And yet . . .

Oh! Larry was right not to understand. He was a generous person who had the faculty of looking at things through the other fellow's eyes. She knew that he didn't like Thayer. It was equally certain that Larry could not be incited to action by mere conjecture or rumor. Tony Peyton left the window suddenly and returned to Larry. She stood before him, slim and determined, and something in her manner caused him to rise from his seat. He waited for her to speak, his face grave. And when she did, her words startled him.

"Larry," she said in a voice little above a whisper, "you've often told me that you love me. Do you?"

His face flamed and, impulsively, his arms went out toward her . . . then dropped again.

"I love you, Tony."

She looked up at him. There was no sign of color in her cheeks.

"I will tell you something I have never said before, Larry. I love you. . . . No!" as he impulsively stepped close to her. "Don't touch me—please! Not now. I'm not finished."

"But you do love me . . . ?"

"Yes. I wonder that you haven't known it. I wonder that you haven't seen it in every look and word that has passed between us. You have; haven't you?"

"I have hoped," he said humbly. "But when one cares for a girl as I do for you, dear. . . . Is—is it because you—do care, Tony, that you've worried about Ivy?"

"Yes. And it's more than that."

She made a helpless little gesture. "You see, Larry—I had hoped to get you to put a stop to the affair without forcing me to say what I have to. There is something I didn't want to tell you—"

"Don't you tell me a thing you don't want, Tony."

A wistful little smile played fitfully about her lips.

"This time I have to. Perhaps I'm glad. . . . I guess I've sounded rather ridiculous and catty. I shouldn't wonder but that you're somewhat disgusted with me."

He laughed shakily. "I'm only thinking of one thing . . . what you just told me."

"I'm thinking of that, too, Larry. I haven't thought about anything else for a long, long time."

She stopped talking. Her hands were tightly clasped. Then she stepped very close and looked levelly into his eyes.

Extras That Add Variety to Menu

Tempting Ways of Preparing Dainties Rich in Vitamins.

I wonder if you use in your meal plans many of what are known as "meat extras." Almost every one, of course, uses liver, especially since it has become so well known as a source of vitamins and of iron. Opinion has certainly turned over in a generation in regard to this meat as a constituent to a child's diet.

It used to be considered no food for children, and consequently many people never learned to like it. One point about its increased popularity is deplored by its older devotees, and that is the fact that increased demand for it has made it increase in price.

Kidneys, although they deserve at least part of the consideration given to liver, from the food value angle, have not become as popular and they can still be obtained at a comparatively low price. If you like kidney you usually like it very much indeed, and consequently kidney en brochette and kidney stew are among the real delicacies. Just writing about them makes me want to go to the telephone to order some immediately, a household expert writes.

We find sweetbreads are more popular generally than the other meats of this type. They are, of course, more delicate in flavor and are usually among the most expensive meats. Brains, either of calves or of lambs, may be used in any recipe which calls for sweetbreads, and also sweetbreads can be used in any recipe that calls for calves' or lambs' brains. You will find any number of persons who have never tasted brains who would like them very much if they were introduced to them under the guise of sweetbreads.

Tripe, especially honeycomb tripe, has its devotees, but it is not as well known in general as some of the other "meat extras."

While calves' hearts are considered the choicest, the hearts of beef and lamb are also used. They need comparatively long cooking and should be well seasoned. Stuffed hearts are particularly popular.

It is hardly necessary to mention tongue in connection with this group of meats, because it is more generally used and more popular than any of the others. Fresh, corned, smoked and pickled tongues are all available and you can take your choice.

Tongue is usually served with some sort of a sour sauce.

KIDNEYS EN BROCHETTE

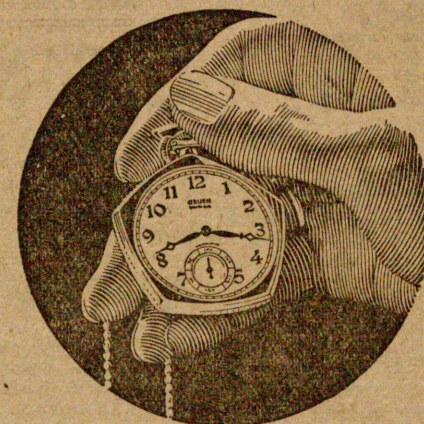

Kidneys
Water
Bacon
Mushroom caps

Trim kidneys, cook ten minutes in water to cover; drain, and cut in slices. Arrange alternate slices of kidney and thinly sliced bacon on skewers with mushroom cap at each end of skewer. Broil under a hot flame until bacon is crisp and arrange on pieces of toast. Serve with sauce made from stock in which kidneys are cooked, seasoned with salted sherry flavoring.

KIDNEY STEW

6 lamb or 4 veal kidneys
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons butter
Flour
1 cup boiling water
Lemon juice
Onion juice

Scald, skin and soak kidneys thirty minutes in cold water. Slice, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Melt butter in hot frying pan, put in kidneys and cook five minutes. Season with lemon juice and onion juice, and more salt and pepper if necessary.

Dividend Printing

►There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

►A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

►The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. Let us prove it to you.

RAPID COMMUNICATION IS COMMERCIAL NEED
Magazine Points to Telephone's Value in Modern Business

Changes in business methods which have been brought about in the past two years are commented upon in a recent issue of "Boston Business," the publication of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Several of these changes seem certain to become permanent fixtures as conditions improve, declares the publication, among them being the tendency of business concerns, including manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, brokers, and jobbers, to conduct an ever-increasing proportion of their dealings by telephone.

Rapid communication has become a prime essential in doing business, because of the fluctuating quotations on most commodities and of the current practice of keeping inventories at a minimum. Another factor, in the opinion of this business publication, which has caused increased use of the telephone by mercantile establishments is the lower volume per order which has become corollary to low inventories.

There are many lines now in which the size of the average order hardly justifies the cost of a salesman's visit, and the only way to increase the number of contacts which each salesman makes, without adding the prohibitive cost of increased visits, is for salesmen to make each alternate call on the customer by telephone.

Feeding Your Family on Ten Dollars a Week

The responsibility of maintaining the family's health and well being has always been the duty of the wife and mother. Today this obligation is more important and more difficult than it has ever been before. It is more important because most families are under an extra strain at present and require all the vitality that good health can give them, and it is more difficult because with changing economic standards most incomes have been suddenly diminished, necessitating a readjustment of food expenditures. To help housewives in making this readjustment, without sacrificing either the palatability, economy or nutritive value of their meals, I am presenting to you a week's menu which will feed a family of five on ten dollars a week.

Each day's meals contain the nutritional essentials of an adequate diet, proteins, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins in the proper proportions. Four quarts (16 glasses) of milk are included each day. Since each child ought to have a quart a day, a glass is allowed for each meal, which accounts for nine glasses. The remaining five glasses are used in cooking and as a beverage for the adults.

Does your soul respond to music? Do you realize the church is the mother of the best music? Have you sacred memories of old hymns that have come to mean much to you?
Do you wish to hear the old favorite hymns sung?
Come next Sunday morning. Our service will be built around the ministry of music.
Next Sunday "Symphony Day" will be the most popular day of the Forward Movement Program thus far. The appeal of music is irresistible. The human heart is stirred by it. Old, sweet memories are revived. Good impulses are stimulated. This Sunday is to be a day of heart joy in our faith as Christians. For this service we have arranged special musical talent. The sermon will be "The Good Shepherd" presented in Scripture and Song by the pastor and choir. We know you will be pleased and helped by this service.
7:30 evening service. This Sunday evening marks the beginning of a two week's preaching mission, evangelistic in purpose. The senior and junior choirs of the church, directed by Mrs. Geo. Gee and Mrs. Ed. Gee, respectively, will assist in the services. The public is invited to attend.
The pastor's class in preparatory membership will meet in the pastor's study Sunday afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30.

Monday evening March 27 will be the young people's night of the preaching mission. The young people are asked to sit together in a body in reserved pews. The pastor will bring a young people's message. On this night we want to see the strength of our young people. How strong are we? Ten strong? Fifty? Or how many have we? Immediately following this service the young people will adjourn to the Creer building to continue this get together of our young people. This after service will be the regular monthly social of our young people. The service at the church will start promptly at 7:30 and the social part of the evening at 8:30.

SUCCESS
Let us not be deenergized by our successes. They have been notable. But we want 100 per cent interest in this Lenten Movement. We want the total profit offered. We cannot feel content until we have "a whole constituency" loyalty among our people.
